The Important Reason

FATS and oils are not digested like starches or proteins. They must first be emulsified in the body before they can be utilized as nourishment.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

is pure cod-liver oil scientifically emulsified—prepared for easy and rapid digestion, just as Nature provides emulsified fat in milk.

This is the important reason why the cod-liver oil you take should be emulsified—should be Scott's Emulsion.

Walter Taylor, county attorney, acted as emcee. He spoke on "Side Lights of Crime." He spoke earnestly and convincingly, yet with reservation due to the presence of ladies. Alfred Anderson, a musical genius, gave some fine solos, playing his own accompaniment on the piano, but the hour of departure had neared. The Kivianian benediction was spoken and, full of brotherly love and good will to all, they turned their faces to that mecca for their hopes "Home Sweet Home."

FARM BUREAU NOTES—FORESTRY WORK BEING DONE

FORESTRY WORK BEING DONE

Woodlot improvement demonstrations were started during this week in Oxford County, with the following men: Tuesday, Sept. 16, George Emerson, West Paris; Wednesday, Sept. 17, A. J. Cantrill, West Paris; Thursday, Sept. 18, J. A. Abbott, North Paris; Friday, Sept. 19, Charles Buck, Woodville; Saturday, Sept. 20, R. M. Norway, extension forestry specialist, Hattisburgh, extension forestry specialist, is to be present at these meetings.

In following years other woodlot demonstrations will be started until such time as all the woodlots in the county have been improved. The farm woodlot is a source of fuel, posts, and timber needed for the farm and will yield profitably a crop which may be marketed—all at a profit, which may be the care of the farm woodlot involves such practices as cleaning up woodlots, thinning, liberation, and burning. Many times when woodlots are cut heavily too many seedlings are left to grow up and the result is a crop of undesirable trees which are of little value. The result is a crop of undesirable trees which are of little value. The result is a crop of undesirable trees which are of little value.

Light thinning at intervals of five to ten years are usually better than heavy thinning. Many times old trees which were not removed during previous cutting operations. Such old trees should be removed to make room for more valuable young growth. Heavy thinning is a mistake. Heavy thinning is a mistake. Heavy thinning is a mistake.

Another type of attention much needed on some woodlots is known as improvement cutting. In well stocked areas of woodlots a portion of the trees should be removed so that reproduction will start. There is a period of years in which trees become ripe, and as with other crops, when trees are ripe, plans should be made to harvest them. Owners of well cared for woodlots are proud of them and realize their value.

THE FARM BUREAU: A NECESSARY ORGANIZATION

Do farmers of Maine need an organization such as the Farm Bureau to put them in touch with the most improved and efficient methods of production and marketing? This question was recently asked by A. L. Deering, assistant director of the Extension Service and also the secretary of the Maine Farm Bureau Federation. An officer in both organizations and having intimate knowledge of the policies and question from both sides, so to speak.

"Yes, is the answer," he said. "That is, in the first place," he continued, "experience has shown that leadership is trained through good organization. One of the limiting factors in getting improved practices adopted on the farms and in the homes is the lack of leadership in many communities. Stated in another way the great improvement in rural progress is due to leadership. To be successful in the Better Ball Campaign, the Top Working Campaign, the Square Meals for Mothers Campaign and more recently the Grow Good Pullets Campaign would have never been possible without the assistance of strong leadership within hundreds of our communities."

Greater Results Achieved

"The Farm Bureau organization makes it possible for county extension agents to achieve many times more results by working through groups than through individuals. While an extension agent may assist an individual in planning a demonstration, yet the results of the demonstration are available to all. This is only one of the many advantages of the Farm Bureau. The Farm Bureau is a community organization and proper since salaries of county extension agents are paid by the public Service, therefore it is not confined alone to Farm Bureau members, but it should be clearly understood that this organization makes the work possible in every county."

Plan Own Program

"Through community and county groups farmers have the opportunity to determine the specific lines of work which they wish to have carried in the program. Obviously this would be impossible from a community standpoint without an organization."

"While it is true that a membership campaign takes lots of time on the part of volunteer workers, yet the results, experience has shown, justify the effort."

The Farm Bureau of Maine form an important link in the entire agricultural system. The work being carried on by these units, especially in our rural sections, stands on its own merits and is deserving of every encouragement and material assistance we may lend.

FARM BUREAU NOTES—FORESTRY WORK—4-H CLUB NEWS

FORESTRY WORK BEING DONE

Woodlot improvement demonstrations were started during this week in Oxford County, with the following men: Tuesday, Sept. 16, George Emmons, West Paris; Wednesday, Sept. 17, A. J. Cameron, West Paris; Thursday, Sept. 18, J. J. Abbott, North Paris; Friday, Sept. 19, Charles Buck, Woodstock; Saturday, Sept. 20, R. M. Hamilton, extension forestry specialist, will be present at these meetings.

In following years other wood lot demonstrations will be started until there will be more areas in each community which have undergone improvement cuttings. Meetings will be held on the woodlot at the time so that others may observe the methods and results and make the improvement needed in their own woodlots. The farm woodlot should be given occasional attention. If properly cared for, the woodlot will supply fuel, posts, and timber needed on the farm and will yield periodically a crop which may be marketed—all at a profit.

Proper care of the farm woodlot includes such practices as cleanings or weeding, thinning, liberation, and improvement cuttings. Many times when a woodlot is cut heavily, the seedlings which are too much sprout growth starts up, often resulting in too dense production. On the other hand, the less valuable species often crowd out, or damage the more valuable trees. If the less valuable species are cut back, the more desirable ones will be released. Such an improvement cutting does not pay returns at the time it is made, but it does pay in that it releases the more valuable species which will grow to a marketable condition. A bushy, light axe, or a hatchet may be used to remove the less valuable species from the woodlot. The principle of thinning is to remove the less valuable species from the woodlot, so that the more valuable ones will have sufficient space to grow properly. No definite rule can be set as to the number of trees to be cut, but crooked, forked, or suppressed trees or undesirable species which are interfering with the crop trees should be removed. Light thinning at intervals of five to ten years are usually better than heavy thinning. Many times there are to be found in woodlots in Maine scattered old trees which were not removed during previous cutting operations. These trees should be removed to make room for more valuable young trees. In many instances this young growth has already started and is being suppressed by these old trees.

Another type of attention much needed on farm woodlots is known as improvement cutting. In well stocked areas of old growth woods a portion of the trees are removed so that reproduction will start. There is a period of years in which trees become ripe, and as with other crops, when trees are ripe, plans should be made to harvest them. Owners of well cared for woodlots are proud of them and realize their value.

BRYANT POND GIRLS DEMONSTRATING AT SPRINGFIELD

Elsie Abbott—Irene Ames

Elsie Abbott and Irene Ames of Bryant's Pond, are at the Eastern States Exposition at Springfield this week, demonstrating the use of color in bedrooms. These girls won this honor at the 4-H Club Demonstration tryouts at Auburn on August 14, where they competed with other demonstration teams in this section of the state.

They belong to the Jolly Workers 4-H Club of Bryant's Pond, of which Mrs. Abner Mann is leader. Elsie has been in club work six years and Irene has taken club work for four years.

The rooms which the girls are using are made from pasteboard boxes. They are decorated to show correct color combination for northern and southern exposures. The furniture is made from tin cans, boxes and the chairs from tiny clothes pin barrels.

This team will demonstrate at the county club contest at South Paris on November 1st.

What Each "H" Stands For

Although club work is a nation wide organization, we find many and women who do not know what each "H" in the four leaf clover stands for. This is explained by the 4-H Club Pledge.

I pledge,
My head to clear thinking,
My heart to greater loyalty,
My hands to larger service; and
My health to better living for my club, my community, and my country.

What the Farm Bureau Has Done for Me

By Mrs. Hattie Millett, So. Paris, Me.

I am glad I belong to the Farm Bureau as I receive so much benefit from the meetings.

The food and clothing projects are very helpful, but I think the household management projects are the most helpful to me as I have learned to save time and steps in doing my work. Besides, I have learned to make sewing screens, tea tables, and tables, and other things one would not feel like buying, and yet we really need.

I feel well paid for all the money and time I put into the Farm Bureau.

Community Standing in Square Meals

Development in Home Economics

Extension

BY ELLIE NASON
Supervisor Home Economics Extension,
University of Maine

Dr. C. W. Warburton, Director of Extension, Washington, D. C., tells us that facts revealed by studies and surveys are being more and more used as a basis of planning programs of work. He says further that over the country people are not saying "What projects has the Extension Service to offer?" but rather "What shall we do to solve these problems we have found?"

Maine is right along with the most progressive states in this movement. Many home-makers remember the clothing survey that led us to put "Dressing the Children" and "Reconditioning the Wardrobe" into Extension programs. Why? Because Maine women wanted help on those two clothing problems.

During 1930, a study of water systems now existing in Maine was studied. As a result, two counties will undertake to get running water into as many kitchen sinks as possible during 1931. Could Maine Extension agents, farmers and home-makers give their time to a more worthwhile job than that?

Dishwashing a Problem

Is there any Maine home-maker who hasn't heard about the "Time Saving Dish Washing project? Why do we hear so much about it? Because dish washing is a job every home-maker has to do and consequently the project answers a real problem.

"Square Meals for Health" is a foods project of which men and women in the rural sections of Maine are very familiar. The planning and serving of meals properly has set some very fine standards for our homes.

We are now attacking another fundamental problem—the feeding and dressing of children. Our Farm Bureau groups are giving splendid cooperation in helping us reach those whom we can serve. We are grateful for their aid. State specialists and home demonstration agents will be giving much of their time to the continuation of the work during 1931.

The farm home, to be successful, needs the best sort of cooperation between the man and woman. Such problems as Home Organization, renovating and properly equipping kitchens, also making vegetable gardens to satisfy food requirements, will necessitate mutual participation by the farmer and home-maker. Don't be surprised if your agents recommend more meetings of men and women together for next year.

Agent On the Job

Don't get alarmed either, if at the planning meeting your program has slightly less day meetings than last year. The home agent will be on the job just the same, in fact she will be in your town perhaps in your home even, more frequently than before. Kitchen demonstrations, getting water into the kitchen sink, helping the home-maker with her Home Account book, interesting and helping mothers of young children will each take its share of the agent's time. Dr. Warburton tells us that "Home Demonstration Work is now on a more satisfactory basis than ever before and is advancing toward greater accomplishments."

NORTH WATERFORD

Mrs. Ward Dead—Browns Made Trip to Massachusetts—Work of Seventy-Five Year Old Man.

Mrs. Elizabeth D. Ward, widow of the late William Ward, had a very bad paralytic shock Monday afternoon, Sept. 8, and fell on the floor, where she lay until found by the meat man, Morton Kimball, who called help and the doctor. She lived until 12:15 Thursday morning, Sept. 11, without gaining consciousness and was paralyzed all over. She lived in her cottage alone in summer, only when having guests, as she preferred living there instead of at her former home at Massachusetts, where some of her children live.

It surely was a great shock to her friends here and elsewhere. The funeral was held here Thursday afternoon and the body was taken to Spiller's Funeral Parlor, and to Atlantic, Mass., Friday, where the funeral was held Sunday. Rev. W. I. Bull officiated here. There was a profusion of beautiful flowers there. The deceased leaves three daughters, two sons one sister and several grandchildren, besides hosts of friends, to mourn their loss.

Annie Hazelton went to Mrs. Ward's Monday and stayed there and helped out until Thursday night. Her daughter, Mrs. Edith Lewis, came Tuesday and returned to her home, Friday, at Atlantic, Mass. Bill Mitchell from Kennebec is working for Winfield Brown driving team and is soon to move his family here.

Mrs. Nellie Farmer is working for Annie Hazelton.

What Is Your Opinion Regarding World's Fair?

"Dear Editor: I have noticed in your paper comments on the county fair at South Paris and really they are interesting, but I want to know what the people of the county and state think about the little one-horse fair in the woods at Waterford, known there the old days till the recent, as the World's Fair. What good times the young and old have realized there. Yes, a good old family and friend reunion where we all seemed to be one great family.

But as the world has progressed and changed with years of age so has the World's Fair at North Waterford, until some of the officers as well as members and patrons of the association have almost decided a change must be had in fair grounds at once. Some say, "must have Fair Grounds" others say, "No, if you ever move the fair from its original setting, it is sure to spoil the fair for good."

One of the officers in the association says that if there isn't going to be a new fair ground next year that he will not be a candidate for reelection to that high office. Another officer says that he will resign if the fair is not staying on the green at North Waterford.

So you see this association is in a fix and wants different ones' opinions on this matter. The association has in its treasury about fifteen hundred dollars. The first year, did not amount to much, as Fryeburg fair was held over on account of rain. That made the association go behind last year about $200.00.

As this is a street fair there is much needed. About twenty-five men being on duty collecting, policing and supervising two days of the fair with a wage of five dollars a day per man, two hundred and fifty dollars, sixty dollars rain insurance, six hundred dollars goes for premiums, one hundred dollars rent of hall and land, sixty dollars printing and advertising. Improvement, two hundred dollars or more. Totalling twelve hundred dollars or more.

Last year around five thousand tickets were sold at 25 cents each. Some say if we had fair grounds we could cut down on labor and expense—that may be so. But folks why not help our unemployed and give them work. This is not a money making scheme. By having the fair on the present site it is possible to use two halls, the Grange and the Old Fellows, which gets a good revenue and the church gets a good revenue, also in serving dinners.

Although it is a lot of hard work, the writer thinks for the present and near future let's keep going as we are now and put our heads together for co-operation.

But still there is doubt. Will those interested please help and give your comments on this great subject through the Norway Advertiser.

Yours respectfully, An Interested member.
